

RAILROADS SEE DANGER IN 6-HOUR DAY LAW PROPOSAL

Railroads of the West have been working since 1880 to solve problems of producers of perishable fruits and vegetables in California and Arizona who ship their products to eastern markets, according to J. R. Hayden, assistant to the president of the Santa Fe Railway.

"Our ability to sell perishable products in eastern markets had its first real test during the decade beginning with 1880 when a few cars of citrus fruits, produced in Southern California, were successfully transported and sold," said Hayden in a recent western radio talk.

"During 1890 some 4,000 cars of California citrus fruit were marketed and planting of commercial orchards on a large scale was well under way. During 1900 approximately 17,000 cars of citrus fruit moved east. A modest tonnage of celery and other vegetables had also begun to move. Since 1900 the production of perishable traffic has reached a scale unparalleled in the history of irrigated agriculture," declared Hayden.

Oppose 6-hour Day
"Since these formative days, many improvements designed to aid the industry. Today the carriers are adequately prepared with equipment and power to meet peak demands, thus terminating one of the problems of the earlier days.

"Happily, the problems of the perishable industry and those of the carriers have always been approached in a spirit of mutual confidence and understanding. If the railroads are not subjected to new and unnecessary legislation, or other influences beyond their control, there is every reason in believing that the industry and the railroads will continue to adjust their differences in the future, as they have in the past."

Reference to new legislation, Hayden pointed out, particularly concerns the so-called six-hour day law which is to be brought before the present session of Congress. If this becomes law the added cost to

Steels 'Tho Tough, Had Tender Names

Tulip, Daisy, Swan, Drake and many other once highly respected trade names for various makes of iron and steel products which appear in the archives of the American Iron and Steel Institute, are now only memories of a more romantic era. Increasing appreciation of engineering data among both manufacturers and users of iron and steel, together with the industry's progress toward standardization of its products for the benefit of consumers are chiefly responsible for the disappearance of most of the old trade names.

As recently as 35 years ago the trade names of tin plate were more closely allied with botany and zoology than with the steel business. Among the tin plate brands chosen from floriculture were Crocus, Hyacinth, Jonquil, Cornflower, Sweetbrier, Holly Wood, Golden Rod, Moonflower, and Star Flower. Zoology contributed the well-known tin plate brand names of Duck, Drake, and Swan.

Trade names still appear in the advertising of steel mill products, but most of them are descriptive of the properties, uses, or composition of the steels, or indicate the name of the manufacturing company. Many stainless and other alloy steels are sold under trade names.

USC Students Hurt by Hit-Run Driver

Two U.S.C. dental college students were injured Wednesday morning when their car was assailed by a hit-and-run driver at 228th and Main street. They were rushed to the Jared Sidley Torrance Memorial hospital for treatment and later removed to their homes. The asserted hit-and-run driver was reported arrested later by deputy sheriffs.

The students were Joe Falge, 28, Los Angeles, who was treated for a fractured leg, severe cut on his left ear and abrasions of his left leg; and Buster Oliver Wallace, 23, Long Beach, who had multiple cuts about his face.

HOMES ARE GOOD INVESTMENT

Have you owners of vacant property in this city studied the possibilities of the National Housing Act loans from an investment standpoint? It is a known fact that there is an acute shortage of properties for rent. Numerous employees working in this district are forced to go outside to find places to rent. This not only works a hardship on the workers themselves, but causes payroll money to be spent outside this community and takes prospective business away from local business houses.

Now is the time for divested property owners to take action. Those owning lots or
